

ELM-PROVISE CORPORATE TRAINING

Improvisation Training for Corporate Professionals

Trust • Acceptance • Teamwork

These basic tenets of good business are the same ones Elm-Provise Corporate Training (ECT) can enhance and develop for your business professionals. We bring learning to life with improv and stage techniques that build individual skills and team performance. Our interactive workshops give your professionals a safe and fun way to practice essential skills and add meaning to their everyday workplace actions.

Our workshops can be customized to focus on the skills most important to your business including:
Communications • Client Service • Leadership • Teambuilding

Working with you, we'll also plan the most effective format and time frame for the training, whether that means a couple hours, a half-day or a full-day program. We can create both pre- and post-work to maximize the learning benefits.

During our programs, participants will learn:

- New ways of thinking—not just outside the box but getting rid of the box!
- A new respect for others in negotiations and/or transactional relationships. When the focus is “how can I make the other person look great !?! ”—setting each other up for success, not failure.
- How to be and act “in the moment” so we instinctively react positively and in the best interests of the organization.
- Making positive choices that keep doors open and draw people to you.
- Proactive listening as opposed to passive or even responsive listening.
- Trusting one another to do the right thing.
- Collaborative teamwork.

Programs are designed and lead by ECT's founding partner Garrett Prejean. Garrett is a working actor with an extensive portfolio of theater and commercial credits. He trained at Second City and other well-regarded acting studios in Chicago before relocating to New Orleans in 2009 to form Elm Theater and its Corporate Training division.
